San Francisco, September 8.—When I left Memphis about two months ag: I was requested to write back something of my observations out here. This I expected to have done after traveling through the State, but the yellow-lever having broke out in Memphis and spread out through the different towns in the surrounding country to such an alarming extent, that I think such a letter, even though you had space and opportunity to publish it, would prove uninteresting to your readers at this time. I therefore only write of the great sympathy and aid many of the people of this city and other piaces in the State have extended and still extend to you all in this terribic calamity. When I returned from Oregon, some ten days ago, I found the dispatches indicating a much worse state of affairs in the east than I had expected, and in conjunction with other southerners here, I immediately set about getting the citizens interested in the distress of our people. A meeting was called by the mayor at the chamber of commerce, it was not largely attended, but much interest was manifested by those present. His honor, Mayor Bryan', was chosen president; Mr. J. C. Patrick, president of the chamber of commerce, vice-president; and Major C. C. Clay, who is well known to many of your readers, was made permanent secretary. A co-committee was appointed, consist-R. The two companies—the Bluff City Greys, com-posed, rank and file, of some of sur most promising young men, and the M'Clellan Guards, of the same class of our colored citi zens-arrived by special train at the depot of the Mississippi and Tennessee railway, where they were met by the Zouave Guards, Captain Brown. The three companies were formed into battalion, Captain John F. Cameron, of his company devolving upon First Lieutenant Herbert Rhett. Headed by the Bluff City cornet band, one of the best colored musical organizations in the country, the line of march was taken up Main street to Court, down Court to Second and to the Bluff City's armory, where, after a brief speech from Colonel Cameron, the companies were "mus-ered out of service," the gallant young solcall the atten to of physicians, nurses and em-loyes of the H ward association, whose route home by Louisville and Cincinnat, to the fact that the rivilege of fret ansportation expires on the secliers returning to the arms of their friends

Colonel John F. Cameron made the follow-ing remarks before disbanding: ing remarks before disbanding:

Frilow-Soldiers (and I am most proud to so address you)—We are now about to stack ams—not disband and lay aside, for we stand ready as ever to respond to the call of duty—but simply disband and return to our daily vocations. Cittzen soldiers, assembling as usual for weekly training, when you were called upon by the citizens to do military duty, you regarded it in the light of a compliment, and an honor conferred, to which you heartly responded. For have you not for long paraded these streets, clad in the habilaments of war, seeking service? And did you not point out a field of duty? And you have well discharged it. You are of the organizations who believe that millitary companies were reganized, equiped by the Stave, and sustained by this community, for the protection of life and property in the hour of civil commotion, pestilence and famine, and you have simply done your duty. You have your reward in the plaudits of your fellow-citizens, the gracious similes of fair women, which every manly ellow yearns to merit, added to which you carry with you the satisfaction which comes from the consciousness of having discharged your duty to the community in which you and your familles receive your daily sustenance.

These companies went on duty at Camp Joe Williams on the twelfth of last August, when the movement to establish a camp of refuge there was threatened with violence by those living in the neighborhood. Their presence served to overawe those who would otherwise, perhaps, have interfered with what has proven to have been the wisest means of saving hu man life from the ravages of the terrible pestilence. Colonel Cameron took command f the two companies organized in battalion, and brought into requisition his well-known military genius and hard-earned experience, by which the camp was excellently guarded and its citizens assured of safety from moles tation from any quarter. It would have done those who have lost no opportunity to launt the bloody shirt in the face of the south good to have seen how harmoniously the white and colored troops served in the same organization, each ready to help the other in a soldierly way at the word. The fever made inroads into their ranks, however, and several of those gallant young spirits who left their homes on the twelfth of August, inspired by the same sense of duty as impels the patriot to take up arms in lefense of his country, fell victims. Peace to their memories. Our limited space prevents a more extended report of the valuable duties performed by our gallant military.
